

Applications Available Now (November 2018) for Hog Island Scholarships in 2019

The Black River Audubon Society, for the past three decades, has offered educators, naturalists and community leaders the opportunity to acquire the knowledge and skills at Hog Island, located off the coast in Maine, to educate our community about bird conservation, wildlife in general, and the environment.

This year one scholarship will be offered for a one week trip that covers tuition, room, board, and travel expenses. The goal is that the recipient will follow the example of those who have returned from Hog Island as ambassadors for conservation and education in our communities.

For more details and description of the camping experience, go to hogisland.audubon.org. Individuals interested in applying for the BRAS scholarship should contact Jim Jablonski at jjablons@lorainccc.edu, or 440-365-6465.
